What Does The APDA Do?

The APDA holds two meetings per year, where members and OEMs can meet and have candid discussions about the state of the industry. During these discussions, a multitude of topics are covered and plans are developed to continue to improve the industry.

Typically, members are represented by their Owners or other key employees in the companies. OEMs are typically represented by their Sales Representatives, as well as Directors, Vice Presidents, and CEOs. By having meetings with employees at the highest level in their respective organizations, the APDA has been able to foster an environment that promotes best practices and growth within the industry.

In the past, some key contributions have been:

- Development of the APDA Search to allow distributors to purchase items from each other for customers in need of discontinued parts
- The creation of the Brand Integrity Coalition which is an initiative to promote to the end user the importance of only buying and installing genuine, factory original, OEM parts. More information can be found at www.BrandIntegrityCoalition.org
- Developing ways to promote authorized parts distributors to the end user, ensuring that they will receive genuine parts and the best customer service
- Creating a standard of best business practices, allowing all of our companies to do better business

Why Is The APDA Important?

The APDA is the strongest partner of the largest OEMs in the appliance parts industry. With nearly 400 brick and mortar locations across the United States and Canada, the APDA membership has the most face-to-face interactions with servicers, multi-housing companies, and homeowners when compared to other sales channels.

We work tirelessly to promote genuine parts and encourage the end user to continue supporting the brand of the OEMs that we represent and are partnered with, whether by purchasing their factory original parts or by continuing to reinforce brand product quality. By partnering with OEMs in this way, the APDA can ensure that the end user is getting a higher quality of parts and customer service than they can find anywhere else, including Amazon, Walmart, non-APDA member websites, and the big box stores.
